

Acknowledgements

This comparative report, which summarizes the major findings from a series of 15 surveys conducted in Central America in the period 1987 – 2003, has been prepared by the Division of Reproductive Health of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (DRH/CDC), Atlanta, GA. The funding for the report was provided by the Latin America and Caribbean Bureau, and the Office of Population and Reproductive Health of USAID and by the USAID country missions in El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua.

While DRH/CDC provided technical assistance for the majority of the surveys included in this report, we would like to acknowledge the contributions of ORC Macro and Family Health International, which also provided technical assistance for some of the surveys included here. Their contributions have made this report possible and richer in content.

Particular acknowledgement is made to the organizations that implemented the surveys in the participating countries of this study. The staffs of these organizations provided dedicated and expert guidance for the surveys and were instrumental in producing the individual survey reports on which this report relies. These organizations are recognized by name on the following page.

We wish to thank the dedicated interviewers, field supervisors and data processing staff in each country for their commitment and dedication, as well as the thousands of respondents who willingly shared information about their lives to make the surveys possible.

A special thanks goes to Rose Pecoraro, for the graphic design and layout of the report and to Danielle Jackson for detailed editorial assistance in the final stages of this project.

We would also like to thank the following individuals at USAID who have been instrumental both in initiating this project and in reviewing earlier drafts of the document:

Kelly Saldana, LAC Bureau; Mary Ann Anderson, USAID/ Guatemala; Connie Johnson, USAID/El Salvador; Herb Caudill, USAID/Honduras; Jay Anderson, USAID/Honduras and Alonzo Wind, USAID/Nicaragua.
